THEORETICAL PHYSICS SEMINARS

The following Seminars will take place on Tuesdays in Room 103

25th February
THE HIGH ENERGY PROPERTIES OF PERTURBATION THEORY
Dr. J.C. Polkinghorne (Department of Applied Mathematics, Cambridge).
4:15 p.m.

10th March
(Title to be announced)
Mr. A.J. Leggett (Clarendon Laboratory, Oxford).
4:15 p.m.
It is proposed to hold an informal Course of directed reading and study during the last week of the Easter vacation (9th-16th April) in the School of Physical Sciences. Accommodation will be provided in Guest Houses.

SOCIETY NOTICES

Archaeological Society. Digging is continuing on Sundays at Seaford, following the line of the Roman Road. All are welcome to attend.

Details of a talk on Saxon England and an informal discussion, with slides, on Hadrian's Wall will be posted up very shortly.

Bridge Club. The Bridge Club will meet at 7.30 p.m. in Room 112 on Thursday, 27th February, Thursday, 12th March and Thursday, 19th March.

The Choral Society meets every Tuesday from 6.30 - 8.00 p.m. and every Thursday from 6.00 - 7.00 p.m. in the Music Room.

Dance Club. The Dance Club meets every Monday at 8.00 p.m. in the Refectory. In the event of changes of time or place of the Club meetings, notices will be posted on the notice board.

Film Society. The Film Society meets on Friday evenings (from 7.30 p.m.) and on Saturday afternoons (from 2.30 p.m.) in Room 102. Performances on Friday evenings (7.30 p.m.) are repeated on Saturdays (2.30 p.m.) except for silent films (marked with * in list) which are shown once only and have a piano accompaniment by Arthur Dulay (resident pianist at the British Film Institute). The programme is as follows:

28th February: ITALIAN STRAW HAT* (R. Clair, France, 1927).

On Saturdays, from 5.00 p.m., there is a Modern European Mind Film Season, programme below:

22nd February: CHRONIQUE D'UN ÉTÉ
29th February: THE UNDERDOG
7th March: MISS JULIET, UN CHIEN ANDALOU

International Folk Dancing Society meets every Tuesday evening at 7.30 p.m. on the Refectory Balcony.

Music Society. There are regular lunch-time record recitals throughout the term.

Orchestral Society meets for practice every Wednesday at 7.30 p.m. in the Debating Chamber.

The theme for discussion on Sunday, 23rd February will be "Are There Sussex Blues?".

UNIVERSITY NEWS

B.Sc. PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION BOARD

The Academic Board has approved the following membership for the B.Sc. Preliminary Examination Board:

Dr. Ledermann (Chairman), Dr. Banwell, Professor Elin-Stoyle, Professor Esborn, Dr. Elliott, Dr. Hamilton, Professor Scott, Professor Smith, Dr. Smith, Mr. Trustrum.

SCHEME FOR ADMISSION OF EARLY SCHOOL LEAVERS

The University has started a scheme by which persons who have been forced to leave school by circumstances beyond their control before they have gained the entrance qualifications for a University will be allowed to apply for admission to the University. The number admitted will be limited (probably not more than six), and rigorous tests will have to be passed by the successful candidates to show their suitability for university education. A large number of local education authorities have been consulted about the scheme; most of them approved of it and are willing to finance the selected students. It is hoped that this scheme will go some way towards providing university education for the ablest early school leavers who have been excluded from it through no fault of their own.

PSYCHOMETRIC AND REASONING TESTS

The tests which were given last term to first year undergraduates were given to second and third year Arts undergraduates on Monday, 13th January. 150 undergraduates attended the session out of a possible 230.
POSTGRADUATE DEGREE

The Senate has awarded the degree of M.Phil. to Mr. R.G. Venasey for a thesis entitled "The Theory and Practice of the French 'New Novel'". This is the first postgraduate degree awarded by the University.

THE BOOKSHOP

The Bookshop Management Committee has recommended that the Bookshop should not at the present time sell second-hand books. There are a number of reasons for this - the lack of shelf and storage space, the complication of the organisation, and the fact that the prices charged for second-hand books would have to be fairly high in order to cover the risk of not selling them.

The Council has agreed that a new building should be provided to meet all the catering needs of the University, if possible by October 1966. Palmer House will then be devoted to Senior Common Room and Junior Common Room requirements and will have only minimum facilities for special catering.

A gift of £35,000 has been received by the University to erect a Sports Pavilion. The Council has agreed to the proposal of the donor that Mr. W.W. Stutchbury, M.A., A.R.I.B.A. should be appointed as architect.

The Council has agreed that the Bookshop should be extended for the session 1964-65 by adding to it a third bay of the cloisters of Palmer House.

PRIVATE DINING ROOMS

The Planning Committee has recommended that the private dining rooms in Palmer House should be reserved solely for the purposes of entertainment and committee meetings. In the future, therefore, these rooms will not be set aside at any time for study purposes.

---

MOVEMENT FROM GUEST HOUSES

The Joint Accommodation Committee have considered the question of students who wish to leave their guest houses. It has recommended the following procedure to the Senate. Students who can find a replacement may leave their rooms in the guest houses when they wish. Students who cannot find a replacement, but consider that they have good personal or academic reasons for leaving, must be granted permission by the Senior Tutor. Since unoccupied rooms have to be paid for at two-thirds of the standard rate, this permission cannot be granted except in very special cases.
GIFTS AND DONATIONS

Mr. T.C. Dundas, on behalf of the Trustees of the estate of the late Sir John Howard, has donated the sum of £240 to the University for the purpose of buying silver or furniture.

Among many donations to the Library, there have been gifts of books from Dr. S.M. Caffyn, Mr. D.A. Davies, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Fairley, Dr. R.H. Garstang, Mr. O.J. Giles, Miss H.E. Howlett, Mrs. M.J. Macalister, Emma, Marchioness of Northampton, the Dowager Marchioness of Reading, Mrs. L. Roth, Sir Charles Snow, the United States Information Service, the School of Oriental and African Studies, the University of St. Andrews, the West Sussex County Federation of Women's Institutes, Professor W. Wight.

UNION NEWS

The last few weeks have been eventful in a variety of fields. The Jazz Trio was one of the finalists and the Quartet reserve in the inter-universities Jazz Federation Southern Region contest at Bristol, and are to go on to the finals at Croydon on 29th February. A group of Russian students were shown round the town and the University and entertained with a social evening organised by the United Nations Club, while the Rugby Club won their match against Clermont-Ferrand University, 16 points to 6. Dave Parry captained the Southern Division of the U.A.U. rugby team, and played in the national team which beat the Scottish Universities. Two successful dances have been held in Palmer House, and the Sunday evening socials are proving popular. A television set has been installed in the glass house.

The Union Committee has spent most of its time debating the draft of the revised Union Constitution, to be discussed by the Union during a series of lunch time meetings before being brought before a General Meeting. Two General Meetings have been held, at which the most important business was the passing of the resolution:

"That this Union utterly condemns the Portuguese Salazar regime in repressing freedom of thought and rights of association among its peoples, particularly among students."

Several new appointments have been made - Duncan Rooke as N.U.S. Secretary, assisted by Trilby Taylor dealing with Vacation Work, Robert Harvey with overseas travel and Irene Claridge with concessions (any student knowing of concessions at shops or cafes should contact Irene through the pigeon holes). Catherine Haste and Helen Jay were appointed Joint Social Secretaries, Ian Small is to take over all charge of the Arts Festival, and Anita Hunt is to organise the Sussex contribution to the New Universities Festival at Keele in May. Michael Clarke, Mary Todd and Catriona Trevelyan were appointed to the Union Fresher's Conference Committee, and a Voluntary Service Committee has been set up to co-ordinate all fund-raising and voluntary service activities and has already had an encouragingly large response.

Important dates to note for the future are 27th and 28th February when polling takes place for the annual election of the Union Committee, and a Charity Dance to be held in aid of the World University Service on 7th March.
UNION TAPE RECORDER AND RECORD PLAYER

The Union possesses both a tape recorder and a record player for the use of members of the Union.

1. Both machines will be kept in the Societies Room, and must be returned there so that others can find them.

2. Both machines will be bookable and anyone wanting to book one in advance must sign their name, and state the time they require it on the booking chart on Danus Skene’s desk. Bookings will normally be for two hours. Before a machine is taken from the Societies Room it must be signed for so that other people know where it is.

3. Members of Faculty may also use these machines.

THAT SECOND-YEAR ZINKIN FEELING

"Two tutorials a week is not enough, and the lectures should be made compulsory," The Guardian correspondent may or may not have been told this "again and again" (by the same student?), but the significance of the complaint indicates the need for further University discussion of the whole question of teaching methods and social behaviour.

At the outset, in all fairness, it ought to be said that, apart from the selective use of unrepresentative and sensationalised quotations, Miss Zinkin’s article was an adequate indication of the main problem. For, when she allowed herself to forget that she was writing for a woman’s page, she recognised that she was dealing with a matter of social adjustment and attitudes rather than purely intellectual arrangements. For my part, the most common students’ complaint seems to be that too essays a week is an excessive number from the viewpoint of study and learning.

On the other hand, the distinction between social and intellectual institutions is obviously artificial, so that any serious discussion must start by considering the broader problems raised.

It would be a great pity bordering on a minor tragedy if the emotions expressed in the Guardian’s quotations reflected representative opinion at the University. For they reflect a flight from mature, individual responsibility entirely inappropriate to a University community. And it is not merely a matter of "spoon-feeding", although it is true enough that any widespread yearning for a University parallel to the schoolchild/teacher relationship would be a sign of dependence unworthy of the putative aim of an eighteen-plus generation. It goes beyond that precisely because a University is a co-operative community in which individual students must co-operate with each other to help themselves. No society worth living in can be based on principles of autocracy, and it is neither the duty nor the right of Faculty members to shape the institutional arrangements within which students find intellectual and social satisfaction. The freedom which is offered by limiting formal obligations to two hours per week, should not be a frightening but a fertile opportunity: given its presence, and the physical maturity of its recipients, any failure of the University community to provide satisfactory facilities for social existence must in large part be attributed to the 90 per cent of our population who have it in their power to shape their own lives. To the same degree that individualism ought not to be equated with anarchy or loneliness, so a worthwhile communal life should not be based upon the direction of the majority by the minority. No one can deny the shock of transition from an authoritarian to a permissive society; but no one should imagine that the undergraduates’ destiny lies anywhere except in their own hands and hearts and minds.
Turning to the tutorial itself, one has only to read the Robbins Report to learn that this particular teaching method is under severe fire. And yet it is my guess that the great majority of people at Sussex who have thought about it at all seriously are persuaded of its extreme advantages in the context of what we are trying to do here. No other method can as well treat students and Faculty as intellectual partners, or provide a productive framework for the mature pursuit of learning. The insistence that study be accompanied by thought, that learning can only proceed from a confrontation of minds, can only be fulfilled if there is a constant incentive to thoughtfulness and argument and if minds are continuously brought together. Admittedly, the tutorial method will be uneconomic and unproductive (although it can perhaps never be as wasteful or fruitless as a pure lecture system) if tutors or their students lack either skill or ability. And yet it is difficult to think of a better means of inculcating skill or generating ability. Students must pardon the rest of us if we refuse to believe their protestations that they are not equipped to write or argue about essays. And they must also have the self-control to realise, on the one hand, that the tutorial may "work" best when the participants are under pressure and, on the other hand, that to ask for more than two substantial essays a week is a waste of everybody's time. Above all, they must appreciate (and it is surely the case that most of them do?) that in an imperfect world neither happiness nor learning can be gained from passivity, dependence, a conviction of inferiority, or an unwillingness to compromise with reality. A University is not a place for guardians.

B.E.S.

WHEN IS A SCHOOL NOT A SCHOOL?

It is said that visitors to Oxford, the Brighton of the Cotswolds, frequently ask the question 'Where is the University?' The usual answer is that the colleges are the university and the university does not exist apart from the colleges. Let us suppose a similar visitor to the University of Sussex were to ask 'What are the Schools of Studies?' What would the answer be?

One must confess that the existence of the Schools within the Faculty of Arts would be difficult to demonstrate. Deans of Schools exist, undergraduates of Schools exist. But do the Schools themselves exist? Their persistent visitor might well ask whether a School of any European Studies or Social Studies is in reality a glorified way of describing a course in European Studies or a course of Social Studies. An undergraduate at Sussex may choose to major in History or Economics in the School of his choice, but in what sense can it be said that this is more than majoring in a particular general course?

The answer must surely be that at the moment the Schools amount to no more than courses, organised in a complex way, under the tutelage of the Dean. The undergraduate feels himself to be following a particular course of studies with a considerable range of choice. The University may add for its own official purposes within the School of X-Studies', but for all practical purposes this saving clause may be omitted.

The point of this brief comment is to argue that the original idea behind the School should be developed so as to make it a reality. No one at Sussex regrets the passing of the department with all its narrow loyalties. Experience at Sussex of the last three years has been such as to render it a dim and unsettling memory. On the other hand the School, on which much verbal ingenuity was lavished, has remained something of a mirage. Promise has outrun performance, the Deans are too far ahead of their support troops. Reaction against 'the department' has been taken to such lengths as to do away with any academic organisation at a sub-university level. So long as the University remained small, this had few apparent drawbacks. Now that expansion is taking place on an unprecedented scale, the University feels the need of developing some intermediate structure between the tutorial and the Dean. The tutorial atoms of the University are functioning well. The trouble is that there are no molecules.

This is the point at which the Schools have their own contribution to make. I believe that each School should work as far as possible as an independent unit, on the analogy, mutatis mutandis, of an Oxford college. This would mean that the School of European Studies for example would have its own philosophers, economists, literary critics, geographers and so forth. As a result a particular ethos should develop within the School which would communicate itself to the undergraduates concerned. Thus an undergraduate majoring in English Literature in the School of European Studies would be taught by men whose primary interest lay in the appreciation of English Literature against a European background. Puritanism, one might argue, would be related to Jansenism and Racine. If the School did develop in this way it would become something much more than a course. It would be essentially a group of the Faculty and undergraduates organised in a way unique among British universities. The answer to the question 'What is the School of X-Studies?' would then be obvious instead of at the moment, obscure.

As a postscript, one may add that the Schools would not ignore each other's existence. There could of course be joint seminars and combined courses. But there would be an underlying logic behind it all instead of the glorious free for all which exists at the moment.

H.P.K.

The Editors will welcome any replies to or comments on the two articles in this Bulletin. These should be addressed to Mr. Lively, Editor of the Bulletin, Arts Building.
VISITORS

Visitors to the University have included:

Professor H.M. McKinnon (Assistant Principal and Head of the Department of English, University of Western Ontario);

Mr. A.E. Chems (Secretary of the Heyworth Committee on Social Studies);

Dr. A.T.M. Wilson (Personnel Division, Unilever);

Miss Jean Rowntree (Head of Further Education (Sound) B.B.C.);

Professor Li Choh-King (Vice-Chancellor elect of the Chinese University of Hong Kong);

Professor John Galbraith and other members of the Educational Policy Committee of the University of California;

Dr. D.A. Kearney (Deputy Registrar, University of Tasmania);

Mr. E.L. Harison (Headmaster of Hilton College, Natal);

Sir Henry d'Avigdor Goldsmid (Conservative member of Parliament for Walsall South);

Mr. Graham Hughes (Art Director, the Goldsmiths' Company).

Groups of Visitors have included:

Members of the Brighton and Hove Higher Education Council;

Minister Jorge Maia (Head of Cultural Department, Ministry of External Relations), Professor Leonidas Schrinho Porto (of the University of Rio de Janeiro), and Professor Pompeu de Souza (of the University of Brasilia) from Brazil.

Future Visitors will include:

Mrs. Lobo (Professor of Latin and American History in the University of Brazil) on Thursday, 20th February;

Mr. S. Paul Chambers (Chairman of I.C.I. Ltd.) on Monday, 24th February;

Dr. Kurt Hahn (Co-Founder of the Atlantic College) on Thursday, 27th February.
