November 3rd
'Categories'
Dr. G. C. Wraith

November 10th
'Velocity Concentrations in Stratified Flows'
Mrs. K. Trustrum

November 17th
'Linear Functional Differential Equations with Constant Coefficients'
Dr. L. C. Suluski

PHILOSOPHY SEMINAR

A regular seminar primarily intended for philosophers will be held every Tuesday at 5.00 p.m. in AB 104. Occasionally distinguished outside speakers will address it. It has been arranged so far that Mr. David Pole of King's College, London and author of a well-known book on Wittgenstein will address the seminar on the 27th October and that Professor Gilbert Ryle (of 'Concept of Mind' fame) will address it on the 17th November.

PHYSICS COLLOQUIA

The following colloquia will be held in Room 103 on Thursdays and will start at 4.45 p.m.

October 29th
'Some Recent Researches on the Ionosphere'
Mr. J. A. Radcliffe, C.B.E., F.R.S.
(Director D.S.I.R. Radio Research Station)
November 12th
'Elementary Particles'
Professor Paul T. Matthews, F.R.S.
(Imperial College of Science and Technology)

November 26th
'Sober Thoughts on Nuclear Cooling'
Dr. N. Kurti
(Clarendon Laboratory, University of Oxford)

LECTURES

UNIVERSITY LECTURES

November 12th
'A Southerner Looks at the South'
Mr. Clifford J. Durr

November 27th
'Rock Magnetism and Continental Drift'
Professor P. M. S. Blackett
(Professor of Physics, Imperial College of Science and Technology)

ARTS/SCIENCE

Two lectures have so far been arranged in connection with the Arts/Science scheme. The lectures will be held on Fridays in PB 103 at 5.45 p.m.

November 6th
'Mathematics and Social Sciences'
Professor R. Stone (University of Cambridge)

November 20th
'Science and Literature in the Seventeenth Century'
Professor D. Davie (University of Essex)

WORLD POPULATION AND RESOURCES

The lectures associated with this course are given in the Geography Terrapin on Tuesdays at 4.45 p.m. The following lectures will complete the course.

October 27th
'Malarial Control, Age-specific Birthrates, and Future Population Hyper-explosion in South Asia.'
Mr. M. Lipton

November 3rd
'Problems of Tropical Environments'
Dr. A. Young

November 10th
'Difficulties of Primary Producers'
Mr. C. D. Cohen

November 17th
'Oil'

  restricted to such areas.  Admission 9d, including refreshments.

Friday Evenings  FRIDAY CLUB - a social club that travels around to the various educational establishments in Brighton - namely, the Teachers Training College, the College of Technology (the new one) and the University.  Evenings of dancing incorporating elements of the above three other clubs, all very informal "instructed" if one wants to be instructed.  Emphasis mainly on ballroom.
  Admission 1/-, including refreshments.

All of these clubs are open to anyone, with special encouragement given to beginners.  Teaching (what there is of it) is oriented to the beginner, so that he feels at home.
RAMBLING CLUB

At the Rambling Club's inaugural General Meeting the following officers were elected:

Secretary: David Bale
Treasurer: John Morgan
Leaders: Liz Clark
          Mike Patefield
          Pete Taylor
          Margaret Walton

The first ramble took place on Sunday, 18th October. One party walked from Upper Beeding to Poynings or Pyecombe, while another went from Pyecombe to Upper Beeding. The two parties met for lunch at the 'Shepherd and Dog', Fulking.

All information about future rambles will be put on the notice board in the J.C.R. under the heading 'Sunday'.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

GENERAL

APPOINTMENTS

The following further appointments to the faculty of the University have been made.

Biological Sciences

Professor of Microbiology

N. Symonds, B.A., B.Sc. (Melbourne), Ph.D. (London), at present on the scientific staff of the M.R.C. Microbial Genetics Research Unit.

Reader

R. J. Andrew, M.A., Ph.D. (Cantab), at present Assistant Professor of Biology, Yale University.

Chemistry

Senior Lecturer

A. D. Jenkins, Ph.D., D.Sc. (London), F.R.I.C., at present Head of Chemistry Research in Gillette Industries Ltd.

Experimental Psychology

Lecturer

W. R. A. Muntz, M.A., D. Phil. (Oxon), at present Research Fellow of St. Catherine's College, Oxford.

Mathematics

Lecturer

D. Cooke, B.A., Dip. Stats. (Oxon), at present Statistician to the Glasshouse Crops Research Institute, Littlehampton.

Politics

Lecturer

R. Pryce, M.A., Ph.D. (Cantab), at present Head of Information Services, European Economic Community.
HONORARY DEGREES

A permanent procedure for making decisions about the award of honorary degrees has now been agreed by Council and Senate, after a great deal of discussion in the Joint Committee. An Honorary Degrees Committee is to be set up which will have the sole power of recommending to Senate and Council whether or not degrees are to be awarded in a particular year, how many should be conferred, and to whom they should be offered. The Vice-Chancellor will be chairman of the committee, which will consist of the two Pro-Chancellors, two Council representatives, the Pro-Vice-Chancellor and four Senate representatives. The membership of the Committee will change by regular rotation. Every year members of Council and Senate and the President of the Union will be invited to submit nominations to the Committee, whilst in addition, any member of the University, senior or junior, may send nominations to the Vice-Chancellor as chairman of the Committee. In this way, the Committee can hope to sound the views general in the University, although it will not necessarily attach more weight to nominations supported by large number of signatures than to those put forward by individuals.

THE CHAPLAINCY

The Chaplain is leading a short week-end conference for members of the University at the Isle of Thorns from tea-time on Saturday, October 31st until after lunch on Sunday, November 1st. The subject will be 'Christian Behaviour in University and Society' and the cost for meals and accommodation will be the modest sum of 15/-. Those interested in going are asked to get in touch with the Chaplain as soon as possible.

On Sunday, November 8th, Mr. Leslie Paul the author of the much discussed report on 'The Deployment and Payment of the Clergy' will speak in the Debating Chamber at 5.00 in the series 'Signposts to the Seventies'. His subject will be 'The Churches'. The idea of this series, in which it is hoped that there will be two meetings each term during the session, is to try to look ahead in a Christian context, to the likely future of a major communal activity. Mr. D. C. Munby, Reader in Transport Economics and Fellow of Nuffield College, Oxford, will speak in the same series at the same time on November 22nd on 'Community Planning'. Mr. Munby is the author of the well-known book, 'God and the Rich Society'.

The Chaplain will conduct Sunday morning service at Falmer House on Sunday, November 15th. On November 29th, Advent Sunday, the preacher will be the Bishop of Lewes. To meet the convenience of those who travel by bus, it has been decided that these services should be at 11.30 and not at 11.00 as previously announced.

Four informal study groups led by members of faculty have been arranged, to meet for one-hourly periods at weekly or fortnightly intervals. Mr. John Wilson will lead a group on 'Is Religion Reasonable?'. Dr. Peter Henmook a group on Alec Vidler book 'Christian Belief', Mr. Stephen Metcalf a group on 'Christian Education and the University' and the Chaplain will lead a Bible Study group. Will those interested in joining any of the groups get in touch either with their leaders or with the Chaplain?

The Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland has appointed the Rev. G. V. Whitfield as Chaplain to Baptist students at the University. Rev. Whitfield's address is:-

Church House,
Moulsecomb Way,
Brighton, 7.
FALMER HOUSE MOAT

The Council has agreed that the moat inside Falmer House will not, as originally planned, be stocked with fish and plants.

STUDIES IN THE NEW LIBRARY BUILDING

It is expected that twelve of these studies will be completed by the builders so as to be ready for occupation from Monday, 26th October. A further eight will become available later. They are primarily intended for students, especially in Arts and Theoretical Sciences, who are reading for research degrees (M. Phil., D. Phil.) and who need to spend long hours in the Library using its collections.

Research students are invited to get in touch with Mr. P. H. Bartholomew if they wish to make application for the allocation of a study. Studies will be let for periods of up to one month in the first instance with the possibility of renewal.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

UNION

The main activity of the Union at the moment is, of course, Rag. At the Rag Queen Dance held on Saturday, 17th October, Adaoma Uzoma was chosen as Rag Queen.

Main events of Rag are:

- Rag Procession - 31st October
- Rag Hop - 31st October
- Rag Ball - 6th November
- Revue - 29th October (at the Essoldo)

Selling of Rag Mag which will be out next week.

Other events will include house to house collections, raft race, and a barbecue.

The big debate of the term seems to be whether cigarettes should be sold in Falmer House.

The Societies Secretariat has been taken over by Greg Mason and Alan Green (to whom room bookings should now go.)

RESEARCH UNIT FOR THE STUDY OF

MULTI-RACIAL SOCIETIES

The Unit came into being as the result of grant made to the University by the Bata Organization in June of this year. It is now established as part of the School of Social Studies.
The Unit can be regarded as having three main tasks:

(a) the assembly of materials and information relating to race relations with particular reference to the Caribbean Area, Latin America and Africa;

(b) research projects relating to this field in which graduate students would be involved;

(c) the arrangement of seminars of varying duration for people outside the University and particularly from the areas concerned. The members of these seminars would be drawn from the universities, the public services, business and labour.

The first of these tasks involves in the first instance the building up of a specialist library and the accumulation of relevant materials in files. The Unit would eventually serve as a clearing house for such material.

In planning research projects it is recognised in general terms that the Unit will be particularly concerned with the significance of the race factor in politics and that although the Caribbean Area, Latin America and Africa are the main geographical centres of concern, it may be useful to carry out research bringing in other areas or fundamental research not directly connected with any particular area. Among possible lines of enquiry the following would appear to fall within the scope of the Unit:

(a) a comparative study of the attitude of different Europeans to problems of colour;

(b) the significance of class in determining colour attitudes in the Caribbean.

(c) colour, class and language in selected countries with different European orientations;

(d) Caribbean-Latin American relations with particular reference to colour questions;

(e) Caribbean and Brazilian attitudes, including the attitudes of politicians, to Africa;

(f) a comparative analysis of approaches to colour problems in Brazil and the U.S.A.;

(g) a study of the contribution of the Negro and Mestizo worker to the Brazilian economy as compared with that of German and Italian immigrants;

(h) colour, social mobility and political attitudes;

(i) mixed marriages.

Initially there is scope for seminars, schemes of joint participation (for example with Israeli scholars, who are very active in this field), and visits to Sussex of eminent foreign experts. It is suggested that the Unit's work should be officially launched with a visit to Brighton of Professor Gilberto Freyre, the eminent Brazilian social historian.

Further development is envisaged in three phases:

(a) Phase I. (1964–5)

The establishment of the specialist library of materials

The Freyre visit

Preparations for the first international seminar.
(b) Phase II. (1965-7)
The first international seminar
Work on two or three research projects
Appointment of a research assistant to the Unit
Drawing together of a group of research students, including students from the Caribbean and Latin America.

(c) Phase III. (1967-8)
The provision of regular international seminars
Publication of research reports
Further extension of the field of race relations studies into multi-racialism viewed comparatively.

THE IDEA OF A NEW UNIVERSITY

A book on the University of Sussex, entitled 'The Idea of a New University: An Experiment in Sussex' and edited by Professor Daiches, has just been published by André Deutsch. It contains chapters on the origin and development of the University, its philosophy and teaching methods, the organisation of each of the Schools of Study, the planning of the Library, the architecture, and the reactions of its first students. Copies are available at the University Bookshop. Price 25/-.

THE ADMINISTRATION

Because of the growth and re-organisation of the administration, it was thought that some detailed information about the areas with which various members of the administration deal would be useful to faculty and students. The first list gives the names of people who should be contacted about particular subjects and the second list gives the secretaries of the various University committees.

The news last week that the University of Essex has begun work in Colchester on a study of the attitude of town towards gown prompts one to consider the nature of the relationship between Sussex and Brighton.

Without a specific survey it is impossible to attempt an objective appraisal of the town's attitude, but the most widespread view among many sections of the community would appear to be one of pride in the possession of a new University. This pride can undoubtedly best be justified by the University expanding its academic stature and creating a progressive image within the University world. At the same time, both town and gown can benefit enormously from a consolidation of their grass roots relations.

At present the more specific attitudes of those who form the complex town community are understandably governed by the degree of close contact with members of the University, or those aspects of town life influenced by the University. Among those who are directly affected in this way certain contributions such as improvements in the town Library, lectures given by members of faculty to a wide range of organisations and classes, and the contributions of the Arts Festival are all ranked high as important facets of a relationship which should be extended.

Among those who have no direct contact with the life of the University and, in consequence, do not appreciate its organisation or the work habits of students, there is an element of criticism concerning the amount of time undergraduates spend away from the University campus. It is understandable that to the outside observer less time would appear to be directed to academic pursuits than is actually the case. Similarly dress habits come under attack as indicative of a lazy and slovenly attitude of mind and as not being an image which should be projected by those receiving the advantages of higher education. Such criticism is, of course, by no means new, nor is it avoidable without enforcing certain standards of behaviour and a specific work schedule on the undergraduate body. This is not only impossible but undesirable, particularly since these outward manifestations are by no means representative of the true attitude of a student group to a way of life or to the role in the community which it will ultimately play. Meanwhile, however, there is every reason for a counter image to be demonstrated through active participation in the life of the community. This is one which must be based on a sound understanding of its structure and needs.

Irrespective of one's party political affiliations the active role played by members of the University in the political life of the town during the recent Election is both healthy and encouraging. The knowledge gained from this association could well be translated with real advantage into a more permanent association with the needs of the community. In this respect it is important to emphasise the very valuable link which has already been established through the University's Voluntary Service Group, organised in January of this year and now comprising over 200 active workers. Activities include helping in Council Homes for children and in the school for mentally handicapped children at Coldean; visiting old people and work in Youth Clubs; organizing parties and other social events for old people and 'deprived' children. New schemes are now emerging to help the blind, the physically handicapped and people in hospital. Such work has been received enthusiastically, not only by the recipients and those in the town concerned with organizing these services, but also undoubtedly provides a valuable practical opportunity for members of the University to obtain a deeper understanding of the problems of community life and the continued need for voluntary service within the framework of a welfare state.

To those concerned with sociology as an academic discipline the town affords an excellent laboratory for research, which has been little tapped. But to all those concerned with the problems of contemporary society, and in this number must surely be included the majority of those in the University, there is clearly a splendid opportunity to consolidate town-gown relations in a way which is as contributive as developing the academic status of Sussex to a forefront position in the University life of the country – one in which both town and gown can be justifiably proud.
