African Studies M.A.: Contemporary Africa Seminar

This will be an inter-disciplinary seminar for all African Studies M.A. students (and other interested post-graduate students) but seminar papers in most cases will only be given by students who are to be examined in Contemporary Africa. The seminar will be continued in the Summer Term.

The programme for the Spring Term is in two parts. In Part I the problems to be considered will be with special reference to Ghana; in Part II with special reference to Central and Southern Africa.

Authors and titles of seminar papers are listed below. Papers will be read at the seminars and should last for about forty-five minutes. All members of the seminar should, of course, come ready prepared for discussion of the topic and to this end an outline bibliography is appended. Authors who require further guidance or reading material for their seminar paper - but after first consulting the bibliographies etc. in the books and articles listed - should contact the member of the School who name appears in brackets after the topic.

Place and time: the seminar will be held in the Library Seminar Room on Tuesdays, 2.15 - 4.15 p.m., there will be no seminar in the 6th week.

Part I with special reference to Ghana

February 1st  Mr. E. Pahad: 'Interpreting Politics in Ghana in the 1950's: a comparison of Apter and Austin' (C. T. Leys)
February 8th  Mr. A. Oloyede: 'Problems of Trade: dependence on a narrow range of exports' (E. Hopkins)
February 15th  Mr. T. M. Mbeki: 'The relationships between indigenous societies in Ghana and modern political developments' (R. Brown)

Contemporary Britain: held in AB172 at 2.15 p.m.

January 31st  Peter Shore, M. P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister: 'Change in a Political Party'
February 7th  Miss M. Miles, Headmistress of Mayfield School, Putney: 'Change in a School'
February 14th  The Right Reverend Bishop L. S. Hunter, Former Bishop of Sheffield: 'Change in the Church'

February 21st  Jonathan Miller: 'Change in Humour and Satire'

February 28th  Dr. Roger Manvell, Formerly Director of the British Film Academy and author of 'The Living Screen', 'The Film and the Public', etc.: 'The Present-day Network of Words and Pictures' Films: 'Lonely Boy' and 'This is the BBC'

UNIVERSITY NEWS: GENERAL

THE COURT

The Court of the University, at a meeting on 17th December, 1965, elected the Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Boyle, Bt., P.C., M.P., as a Pro-Chancellor of the University.

The Court also elected the following to serve on the Council of the University:

The Rt. Hon. the Lord Beeching
Mr. J. E. H. Davies, M.B.E.
Dame Flora Robson, D.B.E.

UNIVERSITY CLOSURES IN 1966

The dates during which the University offices and teaching buildings, the Park Houses and the Refectory will be closed during 1966 were printed in the Bulletin of 10th December, 1965.

The Library will be closed on the following days:

Friday, 8th April - Tuesday, 12th April, 1966 inclusive
Saturday, 27th August - Monday, 29th August, 1966 inclusive
Saturday, 24th December, 1966 - 1st January, 1967 inclusive

Whit Monday, 30th May, 1966 will be treated as an ordinary working day, and all buildings will be open.

PART-TIME AND CASUAL EMPLOYMENT IN THE UNIVERSITY

The University often employs temporary staff either full-time or part-time. If wives, relatives or friends of members of the University are interested in further details of employment of this nature and have had some previous experience, such as in shorthand-typing, typing, clerical or accounts work, they should contact: Mr. J. G. Davies, Assistant Registrar (Establishment) at Stanmer House.

RESIDENCE OF MEMBERS OF STAFF

The Senate and the Council of the University have agreed that, unless an exception has been made by the Vice-Chancellor in any individual case, members of the permanent staff of the University are required to reside within 20 miles of the University Park.

ANTHOLOGY OF POETRY

The Exeter University Arts Festival Committee invites students of the University of Sussex, who have composed their own poetry, to take part in an Anthology of Poetry at 8.00 p.m. on Monday, 14th March, 1966.

Students of several Universities have been invited to participate in this presentation. If students are unable to attend in person, they are invited to send poems to be read, either by a member of their own University, or by a student from Exeter.

Poems should be submitted in advance, before February 1st to:

Miss Yvonne Evans, Anthology of Poetry, University of Exeter Arts Festival, 15, York Road, Exeter.

Accommodation will be arranged for students who wish to stay overnight. The Arts Festival Committee is willing to contribute towards the cost of travel to and from Exeter and requests that details of such expenses be submitted.
THE INSTITUTE OF DEVELOPMENT STUDIES

The Institute of Development Studies which is being established here in co-operation with the University began its work here this month. Mr. J. R. Symonds, the Acting Director arrived on 17th January: the Secretary, Mr. T. W. Gee, is already established in offices in Essex House. Rapid developments are being planned with a view to making a start on its teaching and research programme in the forthcoming academic year. A fuller account of the operations and progress of the Institute will appear in a later edition.

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES IN SOCIAL STUDIES IN THE CIVIL SERVICE

I have been asked to publicise the fact that there is an increasing number of research posts available to new graduates in various government departments. The Civil Service Commissioners are anxious to attract good students 'with a preference and aptitude for research work of a kind in some ways akin to, but less purely academic than, that done in the universities'. They expect there to be a fairly large number of vacancies for students with a training in Social Studies in the coming year, and feel that in the past their formal approaches through the Appointments Boards and advertisements may have failed to appeal to good potential candidates. Hence the new more personalised approach.

The closing date for applications will be 30th January, 1966.

Further enquiries can be made to:

W. E. Wightman, Assistant Director of Examinations, Civil Service Commission, 23, Savile Row, London W.I.

SPORTS ACTIVITIES

Relaxation of the restriction limiting sports activities to Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and Sundays

Senate has considered a request made by the Sports Federation for a relaxation of the restriction limiting sports activities to Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and Sundays. This request was made because of the serious shortage of sports facilities in relation to the large number of students at the University.

Senate agreed in principle that the restriction should be relaxed for a trial period over the academic session 1965/66, but subject to the following conditions: (a) that on other days than Wednesdays and Saturdays academic commitments should have absolute priority and (b) that, except in exceptional circumstances, sports activities on other days than Wednesdays and Saturdays should be exclusively intra-mural - games with visiting teams should take place on Wednesdays and Saturdays only.

The Sports Federation subsequently gave its assurance that sports activities will be restricted to afternoons and that it would take vigorous steps to ensure that all clubs realise in what spirit they must avail themselves of the concession that has been made.

RESEARCH IN ASTRONOMY

The Science Research Council has agreed to make a grant of up to £33,500 to enable the University to establish a research group in theoretical astronomy. The group will be led by Professor W.H. McCrea, F.R.S.

The group will form part of a joint programme of teaching and research by the University of Sussex and the Royal Greenwich Observatory at Herstmonceux. In this connexion, the University has made the following appointments:

Visiting Professor: Sir Richard v.d. R. Woolley, F.R.S.
Visiting Readers: Dr. D. Lynden-Bell and Dr. B. E. J. Pagel

In addition, the University now proceeding to an appointment to a further Chair in Theoretical Astronomy.

APPOINTMENTS TO CHAIRS

The University announces the following appointments to Chairs:-

Professor of Education

Professor of Mathematics and Statistics
J. F. C. Kingman, M.A. (Cantab), at present Reader in Mathematics and Statistics, University of Sussex (from 1st April, 1966)

Professor of Mechanical Engineering
F. J. Bayley, Ph.D. (Durham), D.Sc. (Newcastle), A.M.I.Mech.E., at present Reader in Gas Dynamics at the University of Newcastle upon Tyne (from 1st January, 1966)

UNIVERSITY NEWS: UNION

SUSSEX AND REGIONAL ORGANISATIONS

The University Union is sponsoring and organising the first Regional Conference. The concept of regional exchanges grew out of the overgrown, impractical structure of the National Union of Students and the small resources available to the Brighton Federation of Students. The cultural and social aims of the New Universities Festival, which is being held at Keele in June, might best be met in a region. The Universities invited to the Isle of Thorns for weekend January 26th-30th are Kent, Surrey, Southampton, Reading and Exeter. The actual definition of the region is flexible, and might include other institutions of higher education besides Universities. Papers for discussion at the weekend, and possible areas of integration and contact are Regional Arts Festivals and exchanges, Regional Debates, publications, information sheets, and regional sponsorship of Voluntary Service Schemes and charity events. The possibilities of co-operation are exciting and the social relations resulting should be very varied and interesting. It is hoped that the Conference will lead to some regional projects in the Summer.

SCHOOLS

Last term, in order to prevent wide-spread isolation and disassociation among students, the University and the Union co-operated in setting up viable social units based on schools. At the beginning of the term most of the schools had common room space, and, with the encouragement of the Deans and the Union joint committees were gradually established to organise the rooms and provide various incentives for their use. Money was allocated by both the schools and the Union for this purpose. As the term progressed the committees found that they were not only dealing with the Common Rooms but also with other aspects of interest to the schools.

This term support will continue and it is envisaged that the representatives elected to the Union Council at the end of last term will prove to be an invaluable channel for information and ideas between the Union and the schools committees. It is hoped that schools dinners/parties will be organised where possible as these have already proved to be a success. The feasibility of selling second hand books through schools should also be looked into. Whenever possible societies should be given support by the appropriate schools as is the case with the European, Economics and Afro-Asian societies.

Not all efforts made so far have been completely successful. There have been several obvious difficulties such as the bad location of Essex House, the lack of space in the Chemistry Building and the existence of the faculty/graduate common room in the Arts Building. The problem that Essex House and the Chemistry Building present is a temporary one and should be solved when Arts II and Chemistry II are completed. It is also hoped that faculty will be encouraged to use their schools common rooms by the social and other amenities these rooms provide.

At the moment the difficulty is in establishing schools; in the foreseeable future there is the danger that they may become too self-absorbed and separated from the rest of the Union. There are in fact several ways in which this can be avoided. Finance is one link-up between schools and the Union; societies are another; the third connection is Council and school committees. It would seem therefore that the University and the Union will be strengthened rather than weakened by all present and future progress. By creating more diversity and choice schools as lively social entities add to University life.

THE UNIVERSITY AND BRIGHTON COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

The College of Education has not yet been long enough at its new home in Falmer for a very close relationship with the University to have evolved. However several schemes are being planned which encourage the hopes of those who see that the University and the College of Education would benefit from closer co-operation.

The most important of such schemes is the proposal that selected College of Education students would be able to read for a Bachelor's Degree in Education under University regulations, as an extension of their present three year Teacher's Certificate Course. The Certificate examination itself might be taken in conjunction with other Colleges in the area under the supervision of a Sussex University Institute of Education.

University entrance regulations already permit those who gain a Teacher's Certificate (with a Distinction in their course of studies) to apply, and several former teachers have already been admitted on this basis. However, the present scheme would make it a great deal easier for the most able C.O.E. students to continue their studies to degree level by providing recognised routes to a university course designed with the needs of professional teachers in mind.

All this will take place, of course, only if present government policy does not render a unified higher educational structure quite impossible. Professor Boris Ford has examined this question in a recent 'New Statesmen' and those in favour of integration can only hope that his arguments will carry the day.

At present, day to day co-operation consists mainly in the frequent attendance of Certificate of Education students at the College of Education, trainee teachers are granted reading facilities in the University library provided they have a certificate from the College librarian stating that the material they require is readily available only in the University library. Although no plans exist for a joint College/University library it is clear that, in practice, there is an encouraging measure of actual co-operation and, more important at this stage, a readiness to make any further innovations which appear to be necessary.

Nevertheless there are no large-scale official schemes at present to enable students of each institution to hear lecturers given across the road. This is rather disappointing; one could see, for example, Contemporary Britain students benefitting from part of the College professional course in Education, while the wider perspectives opened up by the Modern European Mind series could be very valuable to the College, which has insufficient resources to offer a comprehensive survey of the roots of contemporary culture.

Socially a good beginning has been made by opening many university societies to College students, and vice-versa, together with the formation of some joint societies. Union news gives details of such meetings. It is possible that dances and hops will be held jointly with the C.O.E., and that integrated weekend programmes will stretch across the road.

The Union officers have got to know their opposite numbers at the C.O.E. pretty well. At this early stage personal contacts may probably serve better than committees to get things done, though one hopes for regular scheduled meetings, outside the regular Federation Committees for presidents and social secretaries. The Union record of co-operation has been good thus far.

From their earliest days the University and the C.O.E. have been sporting rivals within the Federation framework. In spite of the inadequate provision for sport at Falmer there is no reason to anticipate great difficulty in the future. Nevertheless the question of catering for the casual sportsman has loomed large lately, and might well be extended to consider how far a joint demand might enable us to justify providing facilities which one institution cannot adequately employ.

In spite of disappointments, such as the siting of shops too far from the Lewes Road to be used by the College, and the provision of two separate bookshops, the general prospects for co-operation with the College of Education are encouraging.

However, there are two larger questions which may be asked in connection with this survey. Will a close relationship with the C.O.E. be possible in the light of present Government policy, and, secondly, whether the University really desires such co-operation. We can either seek closer links, or withdraw into isolation without much loss to ourselves. At present we are not committed to aid and assist the C.O.E., even in matters academic, although I hope that we decide to do so. But in the light of the present Whitehall opposition to close relationships between the various institutions of higher education it is necessary to make our decision quickly.

John Wilkes.
STUDY AND SERVE OVERSEAS

What is the Scheme?

It is a plan for 1,000 British students over a period of five years to do postgraduate work followed by at least one year of service in a developing Commonwealth country.

It was announced by the British Government at the Third Commonwealth Education Conference in 1964.

It incorporates the pilot project that has been running for four years at Makerere University College; here British graduates take a Diploma in Education and go on to teach for a couple of years in East Africa. 140 British students have already taken part in this Makerere venture and about 50 more will be going this year.

It allows the students - in a wide spectrum of subjects - to undertake the period of employment either in the University itself or with the Government or with some other approved employer. Study and employment may be consecutive or concurrent.

What opportunities for study does the Scheme provide?

To work for further qualifications either on a one year course for a diploma or degree or, part-time over two years, on a longer course combining this with part-time employment, perhaps as a supervisor or demonstrator in the university.

Often study will be for the degrees of the overseas university. In some cases, however, British Universities have arrangements by which work towards their higher degrees may be done overseas. For example, one student is at present continuing his work for an Edinburgh Ph.D. whilst he is employed part-time as an assistant lecturer at one of the East African Colleges.

What sort of person does this Scheme cater for?

For graduates:
who wish to further their careers, whether within or without the academic world, by a period of further study;
who would like to undertake this study at a university in a developing Commonwealth country, and at the same time do a job of work in the country of their choice.

How is the study part arranged?

Wherever possible by direct contact between the home and the overseas universities.

We are also ourselves asking overseas universities to let us have full details of the opportunities that exist for students. Thus we shall be able to let enquirers have details of openings and put them in touch with interested departments in overseas universities so that specific proposals may be put to us.

What opportunities for employment does the Scheme provide?

Where the study has been for a professional diploma, e.g. in Education, employment will usually be found within that field. There are openings in Government service or in Research Institutions. For example, two students with Cambridge Economics degrees will be combining studies at the Rhodes-Livingstone Institute with work on national development planning for the Zambia Government.

In many cases employment will be found within the university itself either following a year's full-time study or concurrently with a longer period of study.

Either the overseas universities themselves or the Ministry of Overseas Development will be responsible for finding employment for the students and for making any arrangements necessary with the Government of the country concerned or with other employers. The nature and terms of his employment will be agreed with each student before he goes overseas.
Who pays for the study? Who pays for the employment?

The Ministry of Overseas Development pays for the study period, college or tuition fees, fares and maintenance allowances.

Where study and serve coincide the British funds available will be spread over the whole period of, say, two years.

The local employer pays for the period of service. Sometimes salaries are supplemented from Technical Assistance Funds. For instance, those recruited to teaching posts in East Africa after taking a diploma in education at Makerere University College receive the normal Overseas Service Aid Scheme terms for teachers by which the local salary is supplemented by the British Government.

In some cases where part-time work in a University is combined with part-time study it may be possible for some of the employer's contribution to be made in kind, that is, by the provision of board and lodgings.

What is the procedure for applying?

Enquirers should preferably talk first to the individuals or groups within their own Universities who are in touch with the Ministry about the staffing of Overseas Universities. Or, if they wish, they may get in touch with us directly at the address below.

Where a student or a University department has a general interest in the possibilities of the scheme, the Ministry would be happy to answer any queries, to put enquirers in touch with relevant contacts, to provide as far as possible details of any openings and to assist with the shaping of final arrangements.

Where arrangements under the Study and Serve Scheme are arrived at as a result of direct contacts with University departments at home or overseas the Ministry would be happy to receive definite proposals showing what form these arrangements might take and what their financial implications are.

The address is:

Overseas Universities Registrar, (Study and Serve Overseas), Ministry of Overseas Development, Eland House, Stag Place, London, S.W. 1. Telephone: Tate Gallery 4366

There will be a meeting for those interested in this scheme at 4.30 p.m. on Monday, 7th February in AB157.

CONTEMPORARY EUROPEAN STUDIES AT SUSSEX

From the beginning the University has had a special interest in European studies: this is now being extended by a series of projects and events in the particular field of contemporary European studies. Three current developments are:

Centre for Contemporary European Studies

An initial programme is now being mapped out for this Centre which was set up last term. Its terms of reference are to develop advanced research into the economic, political and sociological aspects of contemporary Europe, with a particular emphasis on the problems and prospects of integration. The Centre will also organise conferences, courses and seminars to increase knowledge of, and interest in, European affairs among other professional groups. In addition, a series of publications is planned.

An initial grant to aid the establishment of the Centre has been made by the Institut de la Communauté Européenne pour les études universitaires. Two Research Fellowships have been created, to which it is hoped shortly to make appointments. Negotiations are in progress for the organisation during the current academic year of a number of courses and seminars. The Director of the Centre is Dr. Roy Pryce.

European Seminar, 1966

For the past several years a European Seminar has been organised at a British university during the Easter vacation with the aim of bringing together students from the countries of western Europe to discuss the problems and prospects of European unity. This year the Seminar is to be held at Sussex from Monday, March 28th to Saturday, April 2nd. It will be organised by members of the European society and its theme will be 'What kind of Europe?'
The scope and size of this year's Seminar has been extended to take account of the growing interest in Europe in this country. In addition to those who have supported the Seminar in the past – such as the European Communities and the United Kingdom Council of the European Movement – this year's seminar is being extensively helped by Encounter as part of a programme of stimulating discussion of European problems.

The programme of the Seminar will consist of a series of lectures, discussion in study groups, and a number of special events. The Vice-Chancellor will welcome participants at an opening dinner at which it is also hoped that a member of the Government will speak. Other eminent speakers are being invited to talk about the future of the European Community, the economic aspects of integration, and society and politics in contemporary Europe.

Among the special events which are planned is a teach-in at which a group of young politicians and others will examine – and be questioned about – the prospect for European unity. At another session leading politicians will be questioned about the kind of Europe they hope to see. And at a further session a group of writers and historians will discuss the cultural implications of unity.

Participation is open to students and post-graduates in British and continental universities. The registration fee is £5: a reduced rate will be available to members of the University wishing to attend. The number of places available is limited, and priority will be given to early applications. Application forms can be obtained from the Union office.

The Chairman of the organising committee, Mr. Raymond Harari (Norwich House) will be glad to hear from anyone willing to help in the organisation. Offers will be welcomed both from those able to attend and from those willing to help during this term with the preparatory arrangements.

Visit to Brussels and Luxembourg

The European Communities' Information Service has invited a group of 20 people from the University to visit the headquarters of the three European Communities in Brussels and Luxembourg on March 16th-18th.

This visit is primarily intended for those who this term will be taking the Contemporary European contextual paper. Some additional places may, however, be available. Applications should be made as soon as possible to Dr. Roy Pryce (Arts Building).

The programme of the visit will consist of a series of talks given by senior officials of the Common market, Euratom, and the ECSC. These will be followed by discussion. The party will leave on Tuesday, March 15th and return on Saturday, March 19th.

Accommodation and meals in Brussels and Luxembourg will be provided by the Communities which are also making a contribution towards the cost of travel. The cost per head, covering the remainder of the travel expenses, will be in the region of £10. Every effort will be made to help successful applicants to find additional sources of funds to cover part or all of this.

Roy Pryce, Director of the Centre for European Studies.

Perhaps it has become apparent to many Sussex students that there is an unusually large number of colonials at the University this year— that particular breed with the loud clothes and flat-A accents, who are likely to order their tea black, if they drink any at all. Americans, of course! More specifically, Californians. Sussex students might as well get used to it. This is the first year of a standing arrangement between this University and the University of California whereby some ten or eleven Californians spend one of their four university years here at Sussex.

At the moment it is all rather one-sided, but the word is that within a few years a comparable number of young Englishmen may find themselves on one of about eight branches of the University of California (the number is rather indefinite; periodically it increases). There is quite a difference among these various branches themselves, but the two Californians authoring this article hail from the two branches which offer about as great a contrast to Sussex as can be imagined – Berkeley and Los Angeles. The difference is not only one of size, but also of the method of education itself. The greatest difficulty in establishing an exchange program between the two Universities is probably the administrative problem of comparing a year of study in Sussex's tutorial system with the lecture and examination system of California.

In contrast to your practice of studying two courses per term, at home, we generally study five courses per semester (there being two semesters per school year). Not that there is any less work here. Two essays each week occupy quite enough of the students' time. But the type of study is different.

The reading one does at Sussex is channeled toward answering a specific question for a tutorial. Often the reading matter is partially left up to the student. On the other hand, we at the University of California (as in the great majority of American universities) spend much more time in lecture classes, and devote most of our reading time to specifically assigned textbooks, in preparation for the numerous examinations we have to withstand during the semester.

There are advantages to both systems. We feel that lecture courses provide students with the benefit of the lecturer's own ideas, and encourage him to formulate lucid conclusions to be transmitted to the students. Also, we feel that the lecture system of California provides more of a broad background in a subject than the practice of assigning eight essay questions. On the other hand, writing essays does have a way of making one think about the significance of what one has read - more so than preparing for examinations. A somewhat inadequate summing up of the contrast between the two systems is that Sussex emphasizes depth while in California the stress is on breadth.

One final point concerning courses. We were happy to note that the University of Sussex has chosen to veer away from the Oxford-Cambridge practice of complete specialization without providing the opportunity to study courses outside ones major field. In America we are not only encouraged but also forced to study some subjects other than those in our fields. We cannot help feeling that a well-rounded education is the most beneficial, and so we hope your experimentation in this area proves successful.

But to compare only the course structures of our universities is insufficient. We would like also to describe our feelings on university life. If we had to summon up a descriptive word characterizing the atmosphere of the University of Sussex, we would have to use 'personal'. The compactness of the campus, the small number of students, and the teaching structure all tend to facilitate the feeling of friendliness and lack of competition.

When one student says to another that he will 'see you', he really will and frequently. In Berkeley or UCLA (with student populations of 27,000 and 17,000 respectively) such a statement would just be a popularly used expression rather than a highly probable forecast. It is possible to go for literally weeks before meeting a fellow student again solely by chance. When one walks through campus here, passing faces soon become familiar. Also, because of your seminar and tutorial systems your faculty members form a less impersonal relationship with their students. This system provides not only a opportunity to exchange ideas upon the topic of study, but also provides an opportunity to exchange views with the tutor and fellow tutee as interested individuals.

Unfortunately, in large universities such as our own, it often happens that the feeling that ones individuality is meaningless, develops. This is due to the poor communication among the administration, the faculty, and the students, as well as due to the sheer numbers of students. We must compliment this University for its obvious efforts to foster communication between faculty and students, as manifested in the wine and cheese parties of the different schools and other faculty-student gatherings.

On the other hand, our large University does offer definite advantages in regards to student life. In Berkeley we can boast of the third largest library in the United States. We can also take pride in our very active campus. Political groups special interest clubs, and sports associations are extremely numerous and generally run with energy and enthusiasm. There are even several organizations providing the idealistic students with the opportunity to devote their spare time and energy to special projects designed to help the surrounding community. And both Berkeley and UCLA have probably the greatest number of different and exciting courses to choose from.

In conclusion, we won't presume to pass any final judgement concerning the relative merits of the two systems. That might be a bit pretentious after just five weeks. One might well prefer the width of the Californian system and the number and variety of courses one can take. Or, one might prefer greater emphasis on ones major and the benefits of more personalized methods of teaching, as is found at the University of Sussex. In each system, what the student gains is mainly up to him. Each has its own advantages, and perhaps in getting the opportunity to experience both, we are gaining the best of both worlds.

We look forward to welcoming future University of Sussex exchange students to our home campuses at the University of California, and hope that these students will enjoy our university and be as impressed with our campuses as we are with the University of Sussex.

Victoria Hasser and Richard Lay.

VISITORS

Past visitors to the University have included:

Dr. E. P. Edgell, Executive Director of the US-UK Educational Commission
Mr. R. McCaig, Assistant Registrar at the University of New England, Armidale, Australia

Past groups of visitors to the University have included:

The University Grants Committee Visitation: Sir John Wolfenden (Chairman), Sir Harold Sanders (Vice-Chairman), 8 members of the U.G.C. and 3 members of the Secretariat
The Joint Standing Committee of Headmasters, Headmistresses and Vice-Chancellors

Future visitors to the University will include:

Dr. J. A. Butros, Assistant Head, Department of English, University of Jordan
Professor R. Mohan, Professor of English and Head of the Department of English and Modern Languages, Lucknow University
Professor E. H. Gombrich
Professor G. Antoine, Recteur of the University of Orleans
Professor B. H. P. Rivett, Professor of Operational Research, University of Lancaster
Sir Edward Boyle, M.P., Pro-Chancellor of the University
Mr. Leif J. Wilhelmsen, Norwegian Minister of Education
Danilo Dolcic, a well known European Socialist
Mr. Brian Young, Director of the Nuffield Foundation
Mr. K. M. Lo, of the University of Hong Kong
Mr. C. G. Plowman, of the Australian National University

Future groups of visitors to the University will include:

A party of Russian Members of Parliament
A party of Berlin student teachers
A party of overseas students
A group of eight German University Librarians

STOP PRESS:

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES

The Finance Committee at its December meeting agreed to revised allowances for travelling and official business. New Claim forms giving details of the revised rates are now available in all School and administrative offices or on application to the Finance Officer. It is requested that the use of forms previously issued be discontinued.

INSURANCE

Members of Faculty and Staff are reminded that the University carries normal insurances in respect of fire, burglary, theft, employers' liability and public liability. The public liability insurance policy extends to cover members of staff acting in the normal course of their duties. A special policy has been taken out to cover the property of members of faculty whilst on the University premises against theft. This insurance includes wearing apparel and personal effects but excludes valuables and cash. The maximum amount of cover in respect of any one person is £250.

Any member of faculty who wishes to make a claim or becomes aware of circumstances in which a claim should be made (e.g. theft of University property) should notify the Finance Officer who will also be pleased to give any further information on insurance matters.
