OFFICIAL OPENING OF DEAF RESEARCH UNIT

At 12 noon on Tuesday, October 3rd, the Reginald M. Phillips Research Unit for the Deaf and other Handicapped will be opened in the Uni's Annex by Mr. Reginald M. Phillips of Brighton.

The unveiling ceremony will take place in the vestibule by the west door of the Education Development Building adjacent to room 100, in which the event will be televised on close-circuit television.

Guests attending the opening of the Unit will include the former Governor-General of Barbados and Vice-Chancellor of the University of the West Indies for the Deaf, Sir John Row, and his wife, Lady Row; Mr. Arnold Bates, Chairman of the National College of Teachers of the Deaf; Dr. Basil Diaf, the past head of the National Deaf Children’s Society and the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ann Briggs.

Grant

The Research Unit for the Deaf was established with effect from September 1st, 1965, with a grant of £322,000 from the Phillips Charitable Foundation. The initial cost of helping the deaf and handicapped was that of Mr. Phillips himself and as a result, the school is self-supporting. In 1969, the research has been using it as a home base to support their work in schools for the deaf throughout the south of England. An attempt is being made by the Unit to integrate the research into the school to provide a hands-on experience for children with hearing difficulties.

Committee of Inquiry to meet this Term

The Committee of Inquiry, into University Organisation, set up by the Vice-Chancellor in June this year, should meet for the first time at the end of the month. The Committee will consist of a Chairperson, the Dean of the staff, and two students of the faculty, and will meet to discuss student accommodation on campus, student representation, and other issues. It was proposed at that meeting that a committee of inquiry be set up to report on the accommodation issue and the organisation of the University.

Debate

The history of the committee of inquiry dates back to 1963, when the Past-President of the University, together with the staff and faculty met to discuss student accommodation on campus, student representation, and other issues. It was proposed at that meeting that a committee of inquiry be set up to report on the accommodation issue and the organisation of the University.

Deputy Vice-Chancellor

Professor Roger Blin-Stoyle will give up the post of Deputy Vice-Chancellor at the end of the Autumn term.

At the meeting of Senate on June 21st, Professor Blin-Stoyle recommended to Senate that the post be discontinued. At the same time he proposed that the post of Pro-Vice-Chancellor should be strengthened and that steps should be taken to improve the coordination of the administration. Professor Blin-Stoyle agreed to continue in the post for one more term, while a new Pro-Vice-Chancellor was appointed to replace Professor J. F. Scott, who takes up his post as Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Science) at the end of this week. During this period, the Deputy Vice-Chancellor is to work out proposals for improving the coordination of the administration, which will go to Senate later this term.

Evidence

The committee will be empowered to take evidence and receive proposals from any member, employee, student, or student, of the University. It will have all the facilities of the University, including the use of the library and the University's research facilities. It will be under the control of the University's Director of Research.

ACCELERATOR BUILDING OPENED

The new accelerator building, which was purpose-built to house a three-million-volt Van de Graaff Accelerator, was opened by Sir Alan Cottrell, F.R.S., Chief Scientific Adviser to the Government.

The accelerator will be used for fundamental studies in many aspects of physics and materials science, especially those concerned with particle and solid interactions, and with changing the properties of materials by ion bombardment and investigating the nature of impurities in solids and the various properties of surfaces. The total cost of the accelerator project, which is under the direction of Professor Malcolm B. H. and is due to be completed by 1980, is £280,000, of which about £200,000 has been provided by the Science Research Council, and the remainder by the University Grants Committee.

The building, which was designed by the University's Architect and Engineer, Mr. J. A. Thomas, is landscaped into the hillside behind the Physics buildings.
